Spotlight: The Inner Circle: Deals & Capital

The Inner Circle is back after a long spring / summer break! The next session will be Tuesday, September 22, 2026 at 3:00 PM Eastern.

The Inner Circle is a private community where founders, executives, advisors and others meet live every two weeks on Zoom to do real work: review deals, navigate business challenges, share feedback, and sharpen strategies together.

Inside The Inner Circle, we focus on five things that move the needle: building community, sharing real-world education, reviewing live deals, tackling business challenges, and creating a space to pitch and pressure-test opportunities. Every session is designed to give you actionable insights, honest feedback, and a network that sharpens your edge.

Every Distressed Borrower Asks the Same Question: Can We Get the Bank to Take Less?

Almost nobody asks the question behind it - why would a lender agree to collect less than it is owed? They won't. Not because you asked.

A client in automotive and aerospace: tariffs hit, revenue dropped 80%, the bank called the loan. Here is what it actually took to get the bank to move.

What If There Is No Right Decision?

Most of the time, there isn't. You choose between two imperfect options with incomplete information, then you execute.

Hindsight makes it look obvious - you picked the right one, or you blew it. That isn't how it works.

Merchant Cash Advances Are The Easiest Credit A Small Business Can Get. They Are Also Dangerous And Dishonestly Sold.

A recent example I reviewed:$15,000 advanced.$20,850 repayable by fixed daily debits over ninety business days. $5,850 of cost of capital in roughly four months. That's about 113% a year simple. Closer to 590% on an effective annual basis. The criminal rate of interest in Canada for a commercial loan of that size is 48%. So how do they get away with it? They don't call it a loan.
